SULZER MUST FACE TRIAL

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 22.—Gov. William Sulzer must go to trial. This was decided by the high court of impeachment tonight, when, by a vote of 51 to 1, its members overruled the motion of the governor's counsel to dismiss the proceedings on the ground that he was unconstitutionally impeached by the Assembly because that body was in extra session when the impeachment was brought.

Senator Gottfried H. Wende of Buffalo, Democrat, an ardent supporter of the governor, cast the solitary nay while seven members of the court were absent.

The governor's defeat was the second that has marked the battle waged by his attorneys to annihilate as far as possible the impeachment proceedings. Last week the court thwarted their attempt to prevent four senators from sitting as members. Their remaining ammunition consists of arguments to prove that certain of the offenses charged against the governor are not impeachable. These arguments will be heard tomorrow.

Tonight's vote was taken in secret session, after an afternoon devoted to speeches by the opposing attorneys. When the time came for the court to render its decision, Presiding Judge Cullen announced that he did not feel inclined to use the power granted him under the rules to be the first to express an opinion.

GETTING JURY IN REUTER CASE

Bartlesville, Okla., Sept. 22.—Mrs. Laura Reuter, wife of the late Charles T. Reuter, her husband in May, 1912.

The case started this morning before Judge Henry Hudson. The same curious crowds of men and women that thronged the Tulsa court house when Guy Mackenzie and Joe Baker were tried and convicted of the murder, were in attendance.

The added fact that Mrs. Reuter herself is the defendant on trial and will tell for the first time the story of her married life with the slain attorney and what she knows of the killing, is making the sensation seeking public even more eager than before to attend the trial.

A venire of 100 men, drawn from all parts of the county, was exhausted today and at 6 o'clock, Tuesday morning, the court issued a call for a special venire of thirty, and ordered a similar number drawn from the jury box. As the case now stands, there are eleven men in the jury box, while the state and defense have each exercised but one of the nine peremptory challenges allowed them.

It is generally conceded that a third venire will have to be ordered by Tuesday afternoon, but owing to the fact that night sessions of the court are to be held, it is probable that the jury will be completed either late Tuesday or early Wednesday.

Nearly every tradesman examined today had read of the Reuter case in the newspapers.

WILSON ISSUES STATEMENT

REGARDING SUPREME COURT DECISION IN SCHOOL BOOK ADOPTION CASE.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 22, 1913.—The Supreme court in the decision concerning the school book case held that the governor's approval of the contracts and bonds was essential to their validity. Concerning this decision of the court and its effect upon the schools, Supt. Wilson has issued the following statement:

"The Supreme court has reversed the judgment of the trial court in the school book case, on the sole ground that the approval of the bond by the governor is a prerequisite to the existence of a valid contract for the furnishing of text books for the common schools of the state.

"Since this case was appealed to the supreme court, Lieut. Gov. McAlester, as acting Governor in the absence of Gov. Cruce from the state, has approved these bonds. Under the decision of the Criminal Court of Appeals in the George Crump case, the approval of this bond by Gov. McAlester is of the same force and effect as if it had been approved by Gov. Cruce. The Supreme Court of course decided this case on the evidence before it, which was that the bond had not been approved by the governor. Gov. McAlester's approval having occurred after the trial in the district court, the Supreme court had no official knowledge of Gov. McAlester's action and could decide the case only on the evidence before it.

"It is unnecessary for me to say that as a member of the State Board of Education it is my duty and intention to respect the decision of the Crump case and to treat Gov. McAlester's acts as legal, as the Criminal Court of Appeals has held they were, unless the Supreme court, when its attention is officially called to the fact that Gov. McAlester has approved the bond, shall refuse to follow the decision of the other court.

"The decision of the Supreme court assumes that the school book contracts were awarded by a legal State Board of Education, notwithstanding the attempted removal of the several members thereof by Gov. Cruce, and places upon the shoulders of Gov. Cruce alone the sole responsibility for the unfortunate condition now confronting the schools of the state. As matters now stand, unless the decision of the Criminal Court of Appeals upholding the acts of Lieut. Gov. McAlester shall not be followed by the Supreme court, this controversy has not been settled in favor of the 1912 adoptions so far as the Supreme court has expressed itself in the opinion handed down today.

MORE MONEY FOR GOOD ROADS FUND

Very few of the citizens realize that beginning on October 5th, 1913, the new law regulating the disposition of the money received for hunting licenses, will go into effect and after that date the counties will get $1.00 of the fees and the remaining twenty-five cents will be sent to the game warden. Heretofore the county has only been allowed twenty-five cents, and the dollar went to the state. The money thus derived will be turned into the county treasury and will go into the road and bridge fund.

Following is the new law, effective October 5th, 1913:

Section 9.—Twenty-five percentum of all fees received for hunting licenses, less twenty-five cents, to be retained by the assistant game warden, county clerk, or other issuing officers, shall, at the end of each month be forwarded to the state game and fish warden, who shall receipt the same and turn such fees over to the state treasurer, to be placed to the credit of the game protection fund of

M'BRINE GETS YEAR ON PLEA OF GUILTY

Oklahoma City Sept. 23.—William H. McBrine, former chief clerk in the state auditor's office, must serve one year in the penitentiary for forgery of a state warrant for $1,000. The sentence was passed upon McBrine by Judge E. D. Old field of the Oklahoma county superior court, Monday morning immediately following McBrine's plea of guilty to the charge of forgery in the second degree. At the opening of court, McBrine filed a lengthy plea for immunity from prosecution for his acts, based upon the alleged promises from Attorney General Charles West that if he, McBrine, would return to Oklahoma and turn state's evidence that no information would be filed against him and that he would not be prosecuted. Failing with his plea of immunity, the defendant entered his plea of guilty and received sentence. McBrine was taken to the Oklahoma county jail, where he commenced his term. His confinement in the county jail counts upon the sentence to the penitentiary.

McBrine was convicted and sentenced upon only one count. He stands charged with forgery of two other warrants in Oklahoma county, and similar charges are still pending in Logan county. He was chief clerk in the office during the time M. E. Trapp was state auditor. He also served a short time under Leo Meyer, successor to Trapp. At the time of McBrine's mysterious and sudden disappearance in April, 1911, it was estimated that between $10,000 and $40,000 was missing from the state and that the money was obtained through forgery of state warrants in the auditor's office.

Minnesota Club Women Meet.
Brainerd, Minn., Sept. 23.—The annual convention of the Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs opened here today with a meeting of the executive board. The sessions of the Federation will continue Thursday and an interesting program has been arranged for the different meetings. Many important matters, from the high cost of living to engendered from charity to dress reform will be discussed.

When you are with your friend you are careful of the little everyday courtesies—the Manners that characterize breeding. All these are important, yet they are separate from the words you actually speak. When you are away from your friends letters take the place of conversation, and the courtesy of correspondence is founded upon a selection of writing paper of good taste.

Isn't it fortunate that good taste is no longer a question of pocketbook?

Entered at the Post Office at Ada, Oklahoma, as second class mail matter

The Muskogee Times-Democrat says that almost enough signatures have been secured to refer the capitol building appropriation passed by the legislature. Evidently the voters in that part of the state do not read the Ada News, for sometime ago we advised them to let it alone.

The governor appears to have the better of the school book controversy to date, but there still remains the act of the lieutenant governor in approving the contracts with the book companies. That may yet have the effect of flooring the governor. Time alone can tell.

Otis Weaver states that Judge Williams' candidacy for governor has met with a hearty response among the Democrats of Shawnee. All classes are solid for him and it looks as if it will take something like a cyclone to tear that section from him. Similar reports are coming from other sections, and at present he undoubtedly has the best of the situation.

If Judge Tom D. McKeown should decide to make the race for the supreme bench his opponents will have something to do if any of them knocks the persimmon. The judge is not only one of the ablest jurists in Oklahoma, but he has a very wide acquaintance among all classes, and his genial good nature makes him a prime favorite wherever he goes. The suggestion that he make the race has been most favorably received everywhere and it is already apparent that he will have strong support from the drop of the hat to the homestretch.

Although short crops have hampered Oklahoma considerably it is far from being on the bum. The tide must turn sometime and those who have had the nerve to fight it out will be the ones to reap the profit. The man who quits and runs away to some other region where prosperity abounds

Wonderful Blood Remedy

Brings Health to a Host of Sufferers.

The remarkable action of S. S. S. in the blood is given impetus by a letter received from E. C. Cook, 708 South Center St., Bloomington, Ill. He says, "I suffered several months and took treatment here, but obtained relief only for a few days at a time. Becoming doubtful of results, I quit the doctors, and there was marked improvement from the start. I used thirteen bottles of S. S. S. and was entirely cured. My blood was in a dreadful condition, and I can not thank S. S. S. enough for my wonderful recovery."

This preparation stands alone among specific remedies as a blood purifier. It is somewhat revolutionary in its composition, since it accomplishes all that was ever claimed for mercury, iodides, arsenic and other destructive mineral drugs, and yet it is absolutely a purely vegetable product. There are more cases of articular rheumatism, locomotor ataxia, paresis, neuritis and similar diseases resultant from the use of minerals than from disease germs direct. These facts are brought out in a highly interesting book compiled by the medical department of The Swift Specific Co., 192 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. It is mailed free, together with a special letter of advice to all who are struggling with a blood disease.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day of your druggist. It will surprise you with its wonderful action in the blood. Do not accept anything claimed to be "just as good." There is nothing else to take the place of S. S. S.

INDIAN NOTED IN CIVIL WAR

(By E. A. MacMillan.)

The press of the country has repeatedly stated that Hon. Gabe E. Parker the well known Oklahoma Choctaw educator, recently appointed Registrar of the Treasury by President Wilson, was the first citizen of pronounced Indian blood to receive recognition at the hands of the general government. Every citizen of Oklahoma should be proud of the achievements of Mr. Parker. He has demonstrated that the Choctaw blood that flows in his veins has been no impediment to advancement, even in affairs political, when backed with the true spirit of American grit and American ideals. The statement, however, is incorrect.

It was a Seneca chief—a lineal descendant of that well known and erratic Seneca chief Red Jacket, in short his grandson, that penned the engrossed copy of the articles of capitulation between Gen. U. S. Grant and Gen. R. E. Lee at Appomattox and who also had much to do with the final terms of that historic document, and incidentally the name of that Seneca chief was also Parker.

Brig. Gen. Eli S. Parker was the grandson of Red Jacket a noted Seneca chief and orator and one of the most distinguished Indians of the New York or Iroquois Confederation. Young Parker was highly educated and a well known civil engineer. Just prior to the opening of the civil war he was engaged as an engineer on government works at Galena, Illinois and became acquainted with Ulysses S. Grant. That acquaintance ripened into friendship and when Grant accepted service in the Union army, Parker followed. Distinguished service at Vicksburg led Grant to make Parker a member of his staff. He rose rapidly in the service and became brigadier general of volunteers and served some time as Grant's secretary. While serving in the capacity as secretary the final capitulation of Lee's army took place, Parker was present at the surrender, took the notes of the meeting between Grant and Lee and wrote out the engrossed copy of the terms, which bears the signature of both Lee and Grant and which is now among the archives of the government at Washington.

After the civil war Parker rose to the rank of brigadier general in the regular army and in 1869 was appointed Commissioner of Indian Affairs, the only Indian who ever held the position.

Gen. Parker died at Fairfield Connecticut Aug. 21, 1895. He had a sister whose name was Hanging Flower.

There are about 450 Senecas in the state at the present time, but no relative of Gen. Parker is known to reside in the state.

CRUCE APPOINTS NEW AGRICULTURAL BOARD

Oklahoma City, Sept. 23.—The new board of agriculture was named by Governor Cruce today, after several weeks of deliberation. The members were chosen from the five supreme court districts, in accordance with the bill initiated by Campbell Russell.

The new board is: First district, J. F. Darby, Muskogee; second district, G. A. Ramsey, Colbert; third district, G. T. Bryan, Oklahoma City; fourth district, I. C. Renfro, Sulphur; fifth district, Frank Gault, Geary.

An opinion from the attorney general several weeks ago settled the matter of an appointment in the third district. The attorney general held that G. T. Bryan, who was elected by the people as president of the board in the last general election for state officials was still a member of the board and president, so that left only four members for the governor to name. As Bryan was from the third no appointment for that district was considered.

All members of the new board are prominent farmers and business men of the state. Frank Gault, the fifth district member, was at one time a resident of Oklahoma City and also a member of the city council. He removed to Geary several years ago and has been raising fine livestock and farming.

The commissions were sent to all the members appointed today, and a meeting will probably be called at once so they may organize. It is expected that a general change in the departments under the control of the board will take place.

SAN JACINTO SURVIVOR DIES AT AUSTIN

Austin, Tex., Sept. 22.—W. P. Zuber, known as the last survivor of the Texan army at San Jacinto, is dead.

He died late this afternoon at the home of a daughter in this city. He was 93 years of age at death and had lived all but ten of it in Texas.

He, with Alonzo Steele, who died a few months ago in Limestone county, were known as the last survivors of San Jacinto.

For two years Mr. Zuber has been in poor health, he having suffered a stroke of paralysis fourteen months ago.

Up to two years ago the frail old man was a familiar figure about the State Capitol, where he was employed by the state as a guard in the senate chamber. He pointed out various objects of interest to visitors, particularly the large McArdle canvas of the battle of San Jacinto, every figure in which he was able to designate by name. His own portrait, done in oil, hangs in the chamber. Mr. Zuber was not an actual combatant in the battle, owing to his tender age, but was detailed by his commander to guard the baggage and the sick and wounded.

In this connection, the story is still told of him that he wept because he was denied the privilege of fighting in the battle.

With his parents, he had come to Texas from Georgia at the age of 10 years, and he enlisted in the Texas army at 16. He was born in Twiggs county, Georgia, July 6, 1820. On coming to Texas the family remained at Brazoria for a short time, after which they settled at Roane Prairie, in Grimes county. Here Mr. Zuber resided until his marriage at the age of 30 years, employed from young manhood as a school teacher. From this county he enlisted as a volunteer at the beginning of the Civil War, serving throughout the struggle as a member of the Twenty-First Texas Cavalry, Carter's Regiment. After having served the Confederacy with distinction, he returned to his family in Grimes County, and afterward removed to Bremond, in Robertson County. Still later he moved to Owensville, in the same county, to educate his children.

"Well, you see they have just heard of the terrible smash-up in the north governor. Metz has surrendered with Bazaine's entire army. And they're naturally frightened at Lorient. And . . . well . . . they won't let us pass the fortifications."

"Won't let us in?" cried Byram hoarsely.

"I'm afraid not, governor."

Byram stared at us. We had counted on Lorient to pull us through as far as the frontier.

"Now don't take it so hard, governor," said Kelly Eyre; "I was frightened myself, at first, but I'm ashamed of it now. We'll pull through, anyhow."

"Certainly," said Speed, cheerily. "We'll drum up the whole district from Pontivy to Auray and from Penmarc'h Point to Plouharnel! Why should the Breton peasantry not come? Don't they walk miles to the Pardons?"

A gray pallor settled on Byram's sunken face; with it came a certain dignity which sorrow sometimes brings even to men like him.

"Young gentlemen," he said, "I'm obliged to you. These here reverses come to everybody, I guess. The Lord knows best; but if he'll just let me see my show a little longer, I'll pay my debts and say, 'Thy will be done, amen!'"

After a painful silence he rose, steadying himself with his hand on Eyre's broad shoulder, and shambled

"Long Live the Republic! Long Live the Circus!"

across the square, muttering something about his elephant and his camel.

Speed paid the insignificant bill, emptied his glass, and nodded at me. "It's all up," he said, soberly.

"Let's come back to camp and talk it over," I said.

Together we traversed the square under the stars, and entered the field of clover. In the dim, smoky camp of lights were out except one oil-drenched torch stuck in the ground between the two tents.

Speed had some cigarettes, and he held the pink package on the table. I lighted one when he did.

"Do you really think there's a chance?" he asked, presently.

"I don't know," I said.

"Well, we can try."

"Oh yes."

"I'll tell you what," Speed said, "if we only had that poor little girl, Miss Claridge, we'd catch these Bretons."

That's what took the coast-folk all over Europe, so Griggs says.

Miss Claridge had performed in a large glass tank as the "Leaping Mermaid." It took like wildfire according to our fellow-performers. We had never seen her; she was killed by diving into her tank when the circus was at Antwerp in April.

"Can't we get up something like that?" I suggested, hopefully.

"Who would do it? Miss Claridge's joints are in the prop-box; who'd do her work?"

He began to say something else, but stopped suddenly, eyes fixed. Jacqueline stood behind me in the smoky light of the torch—Jacqueline, bare of arm and knee, with her sea-blue eyes very wide and the witch-locks clustering around the dim oval of her face. After a moment's absolute silence she said: "I came from Paradise. Don't you remember?"

"Of course I remember you, Jacqueline. And I have an idea you ought to be in bed."

"Won't you sit down?" asked Speed.

"Thank you," said Jacqueline, gravely.

She seated herself on a sack of sawdust, clasping her slender hands between her knees, and looked earnestly at the elephant. Speed asked her, jestingly, why she did not join the circus.

"It is what I wish," she said, under her breath.

"And ride white horses?"

"Will you take me?" she cried, passionately, springing to her feet.

Amazed at her earnestness, I tried to explain that such an idea was out of the question. She listened anxiously at first, then her eyes fell and she stood there in the torch-light, head hanging.

"I should like to see a circus," she said. "Then I should know what to do. That I can swing higher than any girl in Paradise has been demonstrated often," she went on, earnestly. "I can swim farther, I can dive deeper, I can run faster, with bare feet or with sabots, than anybody, man or woman, from the Beacon to Our Lady's chapel."

"So you can dive and swim?" asked Speed, with a glance at me.

"Like the salmon in the Laita, monsieur."

"Under water?"

"Furiously!"

After a pause I asked her age.

"Fifteen, M'sieu Scarlett. Won't you take me?" she asked, sweetly.

"I'll tell you what I'll do, Jacqueline," said I. "Very early in the morning I'll go down to your house and see your father. Then, if he makes no objection, I'll get you to put on a pretty swimming suit, all made out of silver scales, and you can show me, there in the sea, how you can dive and swim and play at mermals. Does that please you?"

She looked earnestly at me, then at Speed.

"Is it a promise?" she asked, in a quivering voice.

"Yes, Jacqueline."

"Then I thank you, M'sieu Scarlett. . . . and you, m'sieur. And I will be waiting for you when you come."

We live in the house below the Saint-Julien light. . . . My father is pilot of the port. . . . Anybody will tell you. . . .

"I will not forget," said I.

She bade us good-night very prettily, stepped back out of the circle of torch-light, and vanished—there is no other word for it.

CHAPTER XXII

Jacqueline.

The stars were still shining when I awoke in my blanket, lighted a candle, and stepped into the wooden tub of salt water outside the tent.

I shaved by candle-light, dressed in my worn riding-breeches and jacket, then, candle in hand, began groping about among the faded bits of flannel and tattered properties until I found the silver-scaled swimming-tights once worn by the girl of whom we had heard so much.

The stars had begun to fade when I stepped out through the dew-soaked clover carrying in one hand a scabbard containing the swimming suit, in the other a gun case, in which, carefully oiled and doubly cased in flannel, reposed my only luxury—my breech-loading shotgun.

The lizard was standing on his door-sill when I came up; he returned my greeting sulkily, his keen eyes of a sea-bird roving over me from head to foot. A rumpled and sulky yellow cat, evidently just awake, sat on the doorstep beside him and yawned at intervals. The pair looked as though they had made a night of it.

"You took my letter last night?" I asked.

"Yes."

"Was there an answer for me?"

"Yes."

So I took the letter and read it—a formal line saying the Countess de Vassart would expect me at five that afternoon.

"Look here, Lizard," I said, "I intend to be friends with you, and I mean to make you look on me as a friend. It's to my advantage and to yours."

"To mine?" he inquired, meaningly.

"And this is the first thing I want," I continued; "and without further preface I unfolded our plans concerning Jacqueline."

"Jacqueline," he said, "dangling the word, 'Is that all?'"

"No, not all. I want you to be my messenger in time of need. I want you to be absolutely faithful to me."

"And what is there in this, to my advantage, m'sieur?"

"This, for one thing," I said, carefully, picking up my gun case. I slowly drew out the barrels of Damascus, then the rose-wood stock and fore-end, assembling them lovingly; for it was the finest weapon I had ever seen, and it was breaking my heart to give it away.

The poacher's eyes began to glitter as I fitted the double bolts and locked breech and barrel with the extension rib. Then I snapped on the fore-end; and there lay the gun in my hands, a fowling-piece fit for an emperor.

"Give it!" muttered the poacher, huskily.

"Take it, my friend the Lizard," I replied, smiling down the wrench in my hand.

There was a silence; then the poacher stepped forward, and, looking me square in the eye, fung out his hand. I struck my open palm smartly against his, in the Breton fashion; then we clasped hands.

"Strike!" he cried; "take my friendship if you want it, on this condition—what I am is my own concern, not yours. Don't interfere, m'sieur; it would be useless. I should never betray you, but I might kill you. Don't interfere. But if you care for the good will of a man like me, take it; and when you desire a service from me,

"Will You Take Me?" She Cried.

tell me, and I'll not fail you, by Sainte-Ellene of Paradise!"

He turned on his heel, kicking off his sabots on the doormat. "Break bread with me; I ask it," he said, gruffly, and walked before me into the house.

From the ashes on the hearth a spiral of smoke curled. The yellow cat walked in and sat down, contemplating the ashes.

Slowly a saffron light filled the room; Jacqueline awoke in the dim bed.

She swathed herself in a blanket and sat up, looking at me sleepily.

"You came to see me swim," she said.

"And I've brought you a fish's silver skin to swim in," I replied, pointing at the scabbard.

She cast a swift glance at her father, who, with the gun on his knees, sat on the hearth hypnotized by the beauty of its workmanship. Her bright eyes fell on the gun; she understood in a flash.

"Turn your back!" she cried.

I wheeled about and sat down on the settle beside the poacher. There came a light thud of small, bare feet on the stone floor, then silence. The poacher looked up.

"She's gone to the ocean," he said; "she has the mania for baths—like you English." And he fell to rubbing the gunstock with dirty thumb.

The saffron light in the room was turning pink when Jacqueline reappeared on the threshold in her ragged skirt and stained velvet bodice half laced, with the broken points hanging, carrying an armful of driftwood.

Without a word she went to work so swiftly that the pink light had scarcely deepened to crimson when the poacher, laying the gun tenderly in the blankets of Jacqueline's tumbled bed, came striding back to the table where a rep-trout smoked on a cracked platter, and a bowl of bread and milk stood before each place.

MEXICAN REBELS BLOW UP TRAIN

Laredo, Tex., Sept. 22.—Fifty people were killed when rebels dynamited a passenger train on the Mexican National Railway, sixty miles south of Saltillo, Friday afternoon, according to official reports to Federal headquarters in Nuevo Laredo today. The train was then looted and the surviving passengers robbed, it is said.

Forty Federal soldiers and ten second-class passengers comprised the official death list. The number of injured was not given.

W. W. Mervain of San Francisco, the only American on the train, is said to have escaped injury, but was robbed in the looting that followed.

Two dynamite mines were set off by electricity, according to accounts from the scene of the disaster. The first-class coach was only derailed but the baggage, express and two second-class coaches were blown to pieces.

DAMAGE SUIT IN DISTRICT COURT

District court has been occupied today with trial of a damage suit against the Katy railroad brought by Gibson James an Indian living near Stonewall. The suit grew out of the killing of Nathan James, a son of the plaintiff at the edge of Stonewall some months ago. Indications are that the case will not be concluded until sometime Monday.

The suit of the American Investment Co. vs. Grundy was concluded Monday, and the jury will probably pass on it Wednesday, the consideration of the verdict being delayed because of the illness of a juror's wife.

SPECIAL NOTICE

Now, Mr. Editor, since you have been so kind in allowing us present our views regarding the proposed Park Purchase, I wish to quote a portion of our City Charter for the benefit of the people not yet acquainted with its provisions.

A portion of Article Two (2), Section Twenty-five (25) reads as follows: "When the value of the property sought to be purchased or sold exceeds the sum of $1,000 but does not exceed the sum of $3,000, the same shall not be purchased or sold until 30 days after an ordinance or resolution providing for such purchase or sale shall be duly passed and published. If during the 30 days, a sufficient Referendum petition thereon has not been filed with the Board the Board may make such purchase or sale."

I desire to give this to the voters of the town so that they may see that this provision of the Charter puts us on the defensive. Thursday is the last day of the 30 in which this petition may be filed. No man should hesitate to sign the petition as this only permits the people to decide for themselves whether this is a wise purchase or not. No man has a legal nor a moral right to place a mortgage on another man's property without giving him an opportunity to pass on it himself.

It is important that you sign this petition at once. If the man who has it does not find you, hunt him up and let us hand them in not later than tomorrow night.

Thanking you for this much of your valuable space, I am,

J. W. HAYES

FARMERS HOLD GOOD MEETING

An interesting meeting of the Pontotoc county branch of the Eastern Oklahoma Agricultural Association was held at the city hall Monday afternoon. It was attended by several representatives from communities not heretofore in the organization, and they left declaring their intention to endeavor to arouse interest in the movement. Francis J. Meek was present and delivered a strong and instructive address on the subject of peanut culture and raising of other good crops adapted to this section.

Drawing for Montana Lands

Glasgow, Mont., Sept. 23.—Under the supervision of the officers in charge of the Government land office in this city the drawing was held today to determine the order in which the applicants for settlement upon the recently opened lands of the Fort Peck Reservation shall be permitted to make their choice of location. The lands thrown open are mostly agricultural lands and grazing lands with natural irrigation, but several large tracts are included in the 2,000,000 acres of the reservation which will depend for their usefulness for agricultural purposes upon artificial irrigation.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS

Another article favoring the park proposition reached the News about 3 o'clock this afternoon. It arrived too late for publication today but will be given space in Wednesday's issue.

This evening a stirring college drama entitled "The Madcap" will be presented at the Desota. A two-reel attraction. Then comes the high class drama "A Chapter of His Life." Sickly children need WHITE'S CREAM VERMIFUGE. It not only destroys worms, if there be any, but it acts as a strengthening tonic in the stomach and bowels. Price 25c per bottle. Sold by Ramsey Drug Co.

Monday afternoon fire destroyed the Dunbar school at Shawnee. It was a building used by the negroes and the loss amounted to about $7,000 which was partially covered by insurance.

Suffragettes have been noted for sometime for their many deeds of daring, and this evening the Airdome will show how one of them took the robbers. It's a rich one and no mistake. Two other good ones, one a comedy and the other a high class drama.
